The Choir, Exeter Cathedral. Exeter Cathedral was built in 1112 by Bishop Warelwast on the site of the Benedictine Monastery of St. Peter. The plan of the Cathedral is cruciform, the length including the Lady Chapel is 408 feet, and the height of the towers 145 feet. The Choir, along with other portions of the Cathedral, was rebuilt to plans by Bishop Peter Quivil, and founded in 1328-67 by Bishop Grandisson. It was first used for public worship in 1859. The whole of the interior was thoroughly restored in 1870-1877 under the superintendence of Sir Gilbert Scott.
